

For some user actions, the operating system may request a password. For example, when installing the printer or updating the software. Depending on the operating system version and the date of sale of the hardware, the password can be avangard, stardex, or stardexdiesel.

If the request is in the terminal, nothing is displayed on the screen when entering the password.

